Risk Leaders: The Next Generation of Risk Management

IRM East Africa Regional Group Annual Conference

We live in an era of unprecedented volatility and disruption. Trends across three major dimensions—economics, demographics, and geopolitics—combined with the exponential pace of technological and regulatory change, are converging to create a challenging new reality for organizations across East Africa. While these forces create new and sometimes unforeseen opportunities, they also create new risks, which must be managed, often in new ways. In this new era, organizations will need to decide whether they will continue with their traditional methods or instead rethink their approach to risk management.

At the conference, we will highlight key issues facing the risk management profession including technological change, i.e. artificial intelligence and big data; geopolitical volatility; culture and behaviour; environmental and social risk and professional practice.

This conference will provide a forum for debate and discussion of these trends, and more, as the profession prepares itself for the future.
